Kane Italians Furnish Another Murder Case

Alfonzo Leuzzo is dead, and Frank Frasino, of Reynolds street, is under arrest with a charge of murder hanging over his head, for having fired five shots from a .32 caliber revolver into Leuzzo's body, his death taking place at 6:15 Saturday afternoon, one hour after the shooting. It was the depth of an Italian's love for his wife and children that prompted Frasino to turn the gun on his fellow countryman. The setting of the tragedy was the living room of Frasino's home, which Leuzzo had entered uninvited and while Frasino sat in another room this intruder tantalized and threatened Mrs. Frasino, who in company with her daughter, occupied the living room when the unwelcome guest entered. Finally the woman burst into tears and sobs, the girl did likewise; with the noise and sound of voices Frasino arose and made his way to the living room. Finding his wife and daughter crying he demanded an explanation. "What in h—— do you want?" Frasino demanded of the intruder. His wife spoke up and told him that Leuzzo had told her that she must "be cut again." The angered husband ordered the man from the house, and an argument ensued. "Me no have to go —me no 'fraid!" said Leuzzo. When the intruder persisted until Frasino could no longer stand his presence and abuses he was heaping upon their heads, he stepped to a shelf in a back room upon which was the revolver. According to Frasino he did not wish to kill the intruder, but thought by "shooting at his feet and legs he would scare him away."

With the gun once spitting fire, Frasino must have lost control of himself and in his anger forgot that he did not set out to kill the man, for he did not stop firing until five balls of lead had been sent with unerring aim into the body of the intruder in rapid succession. One pierced his left leg, one his right leg, one entered the thigh, one tore through the abdomen from the left side and one entered the abdomen from the right side. Screaming, the injured man ran from the house and made his way possibly 60 feet along the sidewalk when he fell beside the walk where he lie 15 minutes later when Chief of Police Losey arrived upon the scene.

"Who shot you?" the chief asked the injured man.

"Frank Frasino," came the reply.

The chief then asked: "Where is Frank Frasino?" He was told he was at home and his home was pointed out to him. He entered the house 317 Reynolds street. A hall is entered from the front door. On one side of this is the "front room," in which Frasino had been sitting when Leuzzo entered the house. At the end of the hall and on the opposite side of the house is the living room. A couch is placed in one corner, while in the corner diagonally across the room is a stove. Two rocking chairs were close to the stove. Close to the wall and in front of the couch is a table and in front of that a stand.

When the chief entered the house he saw a man sitting in a chair close to the couch, talking to a woman who was seated on the couch facing him. They were surrounded by five children. Losey looked into the back rooms to make sure that no person was escaping, then returned to the man and asked, "Where is Frank Frasino?" The man arose, and placing both hands on his chest said, "Me Frank Frasino."

"Did you shoot this man?" asked the chief.

"Yes, me shot him," he replied.

He was then placed under arrest and led from the house. They came up to where the injured man was lying on the grass.

"Is this the man who shot you?" the officer asked the injured man. "I can't see," was the reply. The chief then asked Frasino if he shot the man and again the prisoner said, "Yes me shoot him." Three witnesses stood by and heard the confession and were reminded to remember what was said.

With his prisoner, the chief proceeded to the lockup, leaving the care of the injured man to the burgess, James F. Wood.

Frasino's thoughts seemed to be all for his wife and children. He made no resistance, nor did he consider fleeing following the tragedy, but sat down and was calmly trying to comfort his wife and their five children when, as related, the officer found him.

The trouble which lies behind the affair is of long standing and has many ramifications. It extends across the sea and back to Kane; it is a chapter so near as can be learned in a series of black hand threats perpetrated by Leuzzo and Mike Cataratoma, whose whereabouts are unknown, over a period of several years past.

Leuzzo is said to have been a pal of Cataratoma, who recently attacked Mrs. Frasino on the street while she was on her way to work, and inflicted severe lacerations on her hands and arms in his attempt to slash her to death with a knife. Mrs. Frasino, however, beat off his attacks and her assailant was unable to cut her in the face, which seemed to be one of his chief aims.—Monday's Kane Republican.

Frasino, who seems to believe that he acted entirely within his rights, was brought to the county jail here Monday by County Detective J. J. Allison.

HAPPILY MARRIED

The marriage of Thos. Ryan, former Smethport resident and ex-service man, who now resides in Chicago, and Miss Dorothy Lewis of Kane, occurred at the home of the bride's parents yesterday. The wedding was a quiet one attended only by relatives of the young people, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Gleason of Smethport being among those present. The bride is described as a most charming young lady by those who know her. Tom Ryan made a notable record in the world war and was awarded the croix de guerre by the French government for exceptional bravery. He is a grandson of the late Thomas Ryan, who lived in Smethport for a number of years and was a Civil war veteran with a notable record.

CAUGHT BIG FISH

C. J. Parker of Franklinville was visiting friends in town last week. Thursday he called at the MINER office and placed on exhibition for a few hours a brown trout, 22½ inches in length and weighing 4½ pounds, which he caught near the village of Franklinville. Mr. Parker said that fishermen of that village were having unusually good luck this year in landing big fish. He told of a brown trout, weighing 8 pounds, which was caught recently near his home town. The fish caught by Mr. Parker proved a drawing attraction while it was on exhibition.

REPORTER-ARGUS SAYS MUCH GAME

Wild game is exceedingly plentiful in this section this year according to reports from various surrounding sections. Bear, deer and rabbits are more abundant than in a number of years and hunters can look forward to great sport this fall.

Buell Strang of Comes Creek reports a valuable sheep killed by a bear one night last week. He also states that bear chased some of his other sheep, but did not catch them. There are a number of bear in that vicinity, and unless a speedy stop is put to their depredations, great damage may be done. As a result the farmers in this vicinity are again urging that the game law protecting bear should be removed.

A number of deer have also been seen in this vicinity during the past week. Calvin Petteys reports seeing one on his farm. Murray Petteys saw a deer last week on the Gillet farm across the river. It crossed this farm and went through the Sherwood farm into the woods. Mr. Petteys followed it up to the woods but lost track of it there. This deer had horns, and did not seem at all afraid. A deer was also seen within the borough limits near the George Cooley place. There is a goat tethered in a lot in that vicinity, and Mr. Cooley and Ed Stone watched the deer play around the goat for some time.

Rabbits are becoming so plentiful this year as to become a nuisance, and farmers are complaining loudly of their depredations. Crops are being damaged and fruit trees girdled by these pests. On the A. O. Wicks farm it is stated that wild rabbits have become so plentiful and so tame that the Wicks boy can almost pick them up as they play about the yard. In traveling a mile on the Comes Creek a few nights ago, Buell Strang reports that about twenty crossed the road in front of him. As a result of the great numbers of rabbits this year, and the damage they are doing, farmers in this section are again urging strongly that the game laws protecting them be removed, and an open season allowed throughout the entire year until they are less numerous. It will be remembered that a similar agitation was started a few years ago but since that time rabbits were not so plentiful and the agitation died down. This year, however, they are more numerous than ever, and doubtless a concerted attempt will be made to have new legislation passed at Harrisburg to relieve the situation and protect the farmer from serious loss to his crops.

Crows are also reported exceptionally numerous this year, and are doing considerable damage to the corn crop. One farmer reports that he poisoned about a hundred of them, and that they are still numerous about his farm doing great damage to his corn field.

Smethport Victorious Over Galeton

Last Sunday's game furnished a large crowd of fans with the most interesting contest of the season. The Galeton team motored 56 miles to keep this engagement, but the long ride did not mar their baseball playing ability in the slightest and they made the Smethport players work overtime to win.

Tommie Clark was on the mound for the locals and he fought an uphill battle to a draw until the tenth inning when he gave way to Bob Hull. Tommie's work was all to the good and it was simply a matter of safety first in substituting a fresh twirler, Bartlett of Galeton gave way to Wilson in the eighth inning under similar circumstances. Clark had 8 strikeouts to his credit, Hull had 1, while Bartlett accumulated 7.

Paul Denning carried away the batting honors with five safe ones out of as many times up. Wilson wisely walked him in the tenth. Gallagher was the fielding marvel of the day and accepted six chances without the semblance of an error. He is a fast player and seems to have hit a clip that is going to make him one of the team's most valuable men.

Frank Moran broke a finger in practice and went to right field, while Paul Moran covered short. This sudden switch worked out fairly well; Paul's two slip-ups were entirely excusable. Wilson was Galeton's hitting demon, while K. Blackman fielded his position well. As a matter of fact, Galeton has a real ball team, able to give any amateur team a good run for its money.

The score was 9 to 8 in Smethport's favor when Gallagher crossed the plate in the tenth inning with the run that ended the story.

Olean is booked for next Sunday and in view of the record Smethport has started for the season it is quite probable that the big York State town will send along the best it has to offer.

COLLISION SUNDAY NIGHT

Sunday night an automobile belonging to a Hazelhurst man, was badly damaged on East Main street as the result of a collision. It is understood that the real cause of the accident was a car parked at the curb without a tail-light. The trees shade the street at that point and absence of street lights make it a dangerous locality for traffic. About midway of the block between Pine and Pike streets the Hazelhurst car was obliged to swerve suddenly to avoid the parked car and in doing so sideswiped another car driven by Smethport young men, and in order to avoid more serious results the Hazelhurst man ran his car into the curb. The car was badly damaged about the front end, and the Smethport car had a wheel smashed, but no one was injured. Policeman Dickenson was notified and the matter was thrashed out in great detail. It is understood that the interested parties reached an amicable agreement.

This is the third and most serious collision to occur in that locality during the past month.

EAST SMETHPORT HAS GOOD TEAM

East Smethport has come to the front with a baseball team that is surely going to advertise that lively town before the summer is over. Fans in our flourishing suburb are enthusiastic over the showing the team made last Sunday, when the players journeyed to Kinzua and took that team by storm, by tornado, perhaps, as the score was 24 to 2.

Nell Walker, a most promising young twirler, held the Kinzua team to a hitless game, while his own teammates slammed the pill almost as they chose.

The line-up of this new organization as it appeared Sunday, was: B. Cooper, catcher; N. Walker, pitcher; M. Schoonmaker, 1st base; J. Walker, 2nd base; F. Sherer, shortstop; O. Crawford, 3rd base; M. Peeler, leftfield; H. Peeler, rightfield; L. McKenna, centerfield.

The President condemns the Republican Congress for lack of accomplishment. His Secretary of Commerce commends the shipping act the whole country commends the railroad act, and the water power measure is universally declared to be a constructive step in the direction of utilization of natural resources that have heretofore been wasted. These are only three of a long list of measures a Republican Congress passed for the purpose of getting the country back on a peace time industrial base.

A well known business man declares that "we are suffering from an excess of government." What he meant was that the country is suffering from an excess of bureaucracy. There is little danger of an excess of government so long as it is a government by law. But it is easy to reach the point where there is an excess of government when it is a government by men who get their ideas from "voices in the air" and who have never had any practica experience in the world of affairs.

The Democratic National Convention will be acting inconsistently with the record of the party if it does not nominate Woodrow Wilson for a third term. In his first campaign President Wilson was pledged to the principle of a single term and his party was pledged to put the single term into effect. No sooner was he inaugurated than he began plans for election to a second term and in no particular did he or his party endeavor to carry out either the letter or the spirit of the single term plank. Not only in the years of his good health, but also during the long period of his serious illness, the spokesmen of the Democratic Congress have acknowledged the absolute leadership and dictatorship of Woodrow Wilson. How then could a Democratic National Convention be expected to refuse the demand of Mr. Wilson that he be nominated for a third term.

CANDIDATE FOR THE RADICALS

The Republican Publicity Association to-day gave out the following statement from its Washington headquarters:

In the coming campaign the Democratic party can count with confidence upon receiving the active support of agreat majority of those enemies of law and order who have been in sympathy with such anarchists as Thomas J. Mooney, the I. W. W. agitator, who was convicted of bombing a preparedness parade in San Francisco in 1916. The Wilson administration has fully earned the right to expect the earnest support of men of that character.

The evidence presented against Mooney was as conclusive as circumstantial evidence can be expected to be. He had a fair trial by an impartial jury and with the aid of the best counsel that could be secured in the United States. His conviction was affirmed on appeal to the Supreme Court of the State.

Notwithstanding these facts, the Wilson administration has consistently shown its sympathy for Mooney and has put forth every possible effort in his behalf. A mediation commission acting under governmental authority was sent to San Francisco to make an inquiry That commission was in close touch with the friends of Mooney but gave little if any opportunity for the state's attorney or other state authorities to make an adequate showing in support of the fairness of the trial and the justness of the verdict. The commission made a report favorable as it could to Mooney.

Later, Secretary of Labor Wilson sent as a special envoy in the Mooney case his nephew J. B. Densmore, director of the United States Employment Service. Densmore manifestly did not approach the task of investigating the Mooney case with an open mind. So far as disclosed he made no effort whatever to secure any information that would be unfavorable to the convicted I.W.W. leader. On the contrary, according to Attorney John M. Olin of Madison, Wisconsin, who carefully studied the Mooney case he surreptitiously established a dictaphone in the private office of the district attorney of the state in order to spy and eavesdrop in the hope of hearing some conversation which would form the basis for a report adverse to the fairness and justness of the Mooney trial. An administration which was elected upon a platform which expressly deprecated the invasion of states' rights by the Federal government sent its agent to spy upon duly elected officers of a sovereign state endeavored to destroy confidence in the honesty of those officers and did it in the interest of an acknowledged advocate of violence and destruction who had been indicted, tried and convicted with full observance of all the processes of law. Densmore made a report derogatory to the district attorney of the State of California. In a cowardly manner he immediately left the state and, notwithstanding the assurances of the Secretary of Labor that he would return whenever desired to substantiate his charges he has never gone back within the jurisdiction of the courts of California.

But that was not all. President Wilson himself, when all other efforts had failed, sent telegrams to the governor urging a commutation of the sentence.

A convention as freely deliberative as a great political assembly can be, a convention numbering bosses, but as nearly unbossed as a party organization has ever been, a convention without a steam roller and as free to express its own judgment and what it honestly considered the true will of the party and the best interests of the country has nominated a Republican candidate for the presidency, Warren G. Harding, senator from Ohio. The candidate is a four-square American, who has worked his way up from the humblest beginnings to the high position from which he is, we believe, to be called to the highest office in the land.

The Democratic National convention is in session in San Francisco and administration forces seemed to control preliminary events. A strong fight will be made against the introduction of a wet plank in the platform and it seems likely that it will be a successful one. William G. McAdoo is the apparent favoite candidate for the presidency, with Vice President Marshall mentioned as the most promising dark horse.

We gather from the scornful comment of Democratic congressmen that the Chicago platform is a sound Republican document.

MADE TOMBSTONE OF ROCK

Probably New Yorker Will Investigate Before He Carves His Name on Another Boulder.

It was quite a while before a prominent lawyer in New York related to his friends a personal experience which he had one summer when, being somewhat run down in health, he went into the Adirondacks to rest.

One day, as he was wandering aimlessly through the woods, he came upon a huge boulder not far from the railroad that runs along the shore of a lake. Listlessly he began to carve his name on the rock, but gradually warmed to the task and chiseled zealously away until he had wrought both name and date with various embellishing flourishes.

As he was proudly surveying the result of his labor, an elderly backwoodsman appeared on the scene. After the customary greeting, he dexterously shifted his pack to the ground, then with a somewhat quizzical air surveyed the lawyer's work.

"Quite a bit of art you've got there," he observed gravely.

The lawyer accepted this tribute complacently.

"Kind of curious how things come about," he went on. "Now, the first time a train was run into these here woods it come in contact with a tramp long about here; and that there boulder marks the spot where we buried him. Now, here he is provided with a first-class tombstone and an inscription that anybody might be proud of. Kinder curious, ain't it?"

MOST POPULAR GIVEN NAME

"John," or Its Derivative, Common in All Languages—Explaining Size of Jones Family.

John is the most common given, or Christian, name we have. Its history is curious. It came originally from the Hebrew Jehohannen, "God is gracious." The Greeks made it Johanan, and in the feminine it became Anna and Hannah. The name was unknown in Saxon England and was seldom used among the Normans. In the Doomsday book, the record of the inhabitants of England which William the Conqueror had compiled, only two Johns are listed, and one of them is a Dane. The German form is Hans, and sometimes Johan. From these we have the surnames Hanson and Johanson. The diminutive is found in Hanks, Hankin, Hankinson, Jankin, Jenkins, Jenson and Jennings. Shane is the Irish form of John and Jean the French. Considering the popularity of the name John and the fact that at this time it was spelled "J-o-n" and pronounced "Jone," the size of the Jones family will be explained. The name means "son of John." John Jones is found in almost every community.

Ancient Bricks Well Made.

Of the durability of the ancient bricks the remains of ancient walls and courses that go back to prehistoric times bear witness. So strong are the well-made sun-dried bricks that they are found as a foundation many courses deep, beneath the ponderous stone work of ancient temples. The remains of the ancient town, now known as El Kab, still exist, with a wall constructed entirely of such bricks, still a solid mass. These bricks now, as in ancient days, are made with mud from the Nile and chaff, not straw, but the admixture was by no means always required, as the Nile mud differed considerably in different places, and in second-rate brickmaking the mixture of "tibu" or chaff was not used. But in great works, such as the greater wall inclosing the temple group of Karnak which was made under the impulse of the government at the time, this chaff was always used.

New Thread Has Fine Qualities.

A sea grass that grows abundantly about the shores of Japan has been found to yield fiber which, properly mixed with cotton, forms a thread much cheaper and stronger than one of all cotton. The process of removing the rind of the weed, which has been patented by its Japanese inventor, is to dry the plant, boil it in lye for two hours and cool slowly. Washing it in water then separates most of the coverings, and the rest comes off when it is soaked in water containing rice bran and brought to the boiling point. The resulting fiber, after rinsing, resembles cotton, and is ready for use. The grass is harvested in the fall and the fiber can be prepared by fishermen. It is expected to have a marked effect on the price of cheap clothing, and to improve the durability of fishing nets.

Meredith and Lady Macbeth.

Lady Butcher in her "Memories of George Meredith," recently published, gives the world not a little new information about the novelist which is both significant and extremely entertaining. Here is one of the passages she quotes from her diary which shows his amazing power to paint with words:

"Mr. Meredith went with father and me to see Irving and Mrs. Crowe (nee Bateman) in 'Macbeth.' During supper he explained the acting of the sleep-walking scene to mother, and wishing to describe the way that Lady Macbeth pushed the palms of her hands from nose to ear, he said: 'My dear Mrs. Brandreth, I assure you that she came through her hands like a corpse stricken with mania in the act of resurrection'!"—From "Book Gossip."

FUTURE AUTO MOTIVE POWER

Interesting Speculation as to What Will Take the Place of Fast-Diminishing Gasoline.

Gasoline will continue to go up in price. A few years from now we shall have to use something else as fuel for our automobiles. The question is, what?

The government bureau of mines thinks that we shall get the requisite substitute from coal. In every city there will be "by-product coke ovens," which will extract from the coal a light oil available for the purpose. The coke can then be used in our furnaces and for other ordinary fuel purposes.

One ton of soft coal in the process of coking yields about three gallons of oil first rate for motor fuel. At present prices the heat in the oil has 20 times the commercial value of the same amount of heat in the form of coal.

Germany during part of the war was practically shut off from every supply of mineral oil. She depended for her motor fuel entirely on coal, putting the latter through by-product coking plants. Before long we shall be obliged to do the same thing in the United States.

Part of the light oil in coal is toluol, which in time of war is needed for the manufacture of TNT. Modern warfare requires enormous quantities of the substance for making high-explosive shells. During the first part of the war the allies came near defeat for lack of it.

Another by-product from the coking of one ton of soft coal is 5,000 cubic feet of gas, available for cooking and other household uses. The coke itself makes an admirable smokeless fuel for furnaces, if people could only be persuaded to use it.

SEES INFLUENCE AS HANDICAP

Charles M. Schwab Insists That Character Is the Biggest Asset in Modern Business.

Influence! The worst thing that can happen to a man is to start life with influence. So declared Charles M. Schwab in a talk to Princeton students upon how to succeed in business, remarks Leslie's. Young fellows who excuse their failure on the score of having no influential friend to give them a boost get cold comfort from Mr. Schwab, who has come up from the ranks, and who now goes so far as to advise any young man who has an influence not to use it to get a start. Mr. Schwab laid down as the first fundamental of a successful life, "Unimpeachable integrity." Character is the biggest asset in business. A whole array of brilliant qualities will not ... the place of this cornerstone of ring success. The whole tenor of ar. Schwab's heart-to-heart talk was a new emphasis on the old-fashioned qualities of loyalty, industry and persistence. The young man who possesses these traits is bound to succeed, for opportunity was never so great as it is today. No industry is more highly organized than the steel industry, yet with all the progress made in the last 20 years the industry is far from its zenith. So great is the magnitude of modern industry in all branches that opportunities for leadership, instead of decreasing as some imagine, have actually increased in proportion as industry itself has grown.

Big Trade in Old Papers.

A curious item of commercial news is that the east coast district of the island of Sumatra in 1918 imported 888,835 pounds of "second-hand newspapers" from the United States. Imports of the same kind of merchandise from January 1 to September 1, of last year, were 572,585 pounds. The papers are wanted to cover young sprouts of rubber trees and sugar cane. The climate of the island is very hot—as might be surmised from the circumstance that the equator runs through the middle of it—and, to prevent the sprouts burning up in the fierce sunshine, sheets of paper are spread over them. Old newspapers serve the purpose very well, each sheet being held down with stones at the corners. In Java the same method of protection is adopted, but in that archipelago sheets of rice paper, imported from Japan, are used.

Evolution of Man Foreseen.

In one of his recent lectures Sir Oliver Lodge, eminent English scientist, announced that the earth would probably continue to exist for 20,000,000 years more. These are, of course, round numbers. Some scientists estimate that the earth will live for ten times this age. There have been animals of one kind and another on this planet for fully this length of time. The dinosaurs are believed to have lived through some such period. The age of man, which is probably only a few thousand years, seems the merest trifle by comparison. When we consider how man has developed during recorded history, which is less than ten thousand years, we may hope that he will evolve to an infinitely finer type in the future.—Boys' Life.

Rhubarb.

A certain East side man was cutting tall dock weed in his back yard with a scythe, and his eight-year-old son was watching, seemingly engrossed in thought. Presently he asked: "Papa, why does God make dockweed?" On receiving no satisfactory reply he set to thinking again. In a few minutes he looked up again, with a smile all over his face. This was his explanation: "I'll bet God got mixed up when he was making things and thought this was rhubarb."—Indianapolis News.

RELY TOO MUCH ON MACHINES

Writer Laments the Lack of Personal Responsibility Discernible Among the World's Workers.

Writing in the Scientific Monthly on the value of handicraft in the re-education of wounded soldiers, Capt. Frank A. Waugh of the sanitary corps, U. S. A., says:

"It is a great defect of modern society that it depends too much on machinery. Everything we touch is machine-made. The common laborer in particular hardly ever sees or touches anything but machine-made objects. He begins life in a machine-made go-cart, eats canned food from a machine-made table with a stamped-steel knife, fork and spoon, dies in the hospital in a machine-made bed, is buried with a machine-made coffin and marked with a machine-made tombstone. When such a man once makes with his own hands a good basket or leather pocketbook he begins to realize the value of honest craftmanship—the place of personal responsibility in the day's labor. This is a most fundamental element in human psychology now largely lost in a mechanical world where objects are made by machines, not by men. The men only feed the machines and are themselves controlled by another social machine called a labor union."

PERMANENT "NO MAN'S LAND"

Sites of Probably One Hundred Villages in France Too Dangerous to Use Again.

Fifteen villages in the Afane district, destroyed by war, will never be rebuilt. There are 17 towns in the Marne district which will be abandoned, and probably 100 in all of France. For many years, at least, the soil on which the villages stood will not even be tilled. It will become a permanent No Man's land.

According to government advices, the sites of these villages are too dangerous to be used again. In order to avoid loss of life the government has purchased the land on which the villages stood and will keep possession of it until it can be made safe.

These sites are the ones often fought over, on which the ground has been turned over and over again, burying explosives of all kinds to unknown depths. There is no trace of buildings left in the 15 villages, so the refugees faced more than the usual hardships. They returned, however, and lived in the worst makeshift caves and dug-outs.

Only signs maintained by the government will mark the sites of the villages, warning people of the lurking dangers.—Stars and Stripes.

Chinese Silk Trade.

The American demand for silk in China has greatly increased in the last few years until at the present time about 25 per cent of the Chinese silk is sent to the United States. This is the result of American enterprise more than that of the Chinese. The Japanese silks had been in favor for a long time with the manufacturers of this country, but it was well understood that the quality of the Chinese was superior, but it was not adapted for use in this country because of the manner in which it was woven. An American manufacturer secured a moving picture reel showing the Japanese methods of manufacture, and as a result the Chinamen were induced to change theirs to a system to conform with the demands of the occidental customers, and the industry has accordingly taken a great jump.

Profitable Investment.

There was once a noble college man, says Harvey's Weekly, who was noted for the profusion with which he spent, wasted and lost money in everything he did, and who kept up the practice for some years in business, after he left his Alma Mater. He disappeared for a few years, and when found again he was working on a farm. A friend asked how he was getting on, and he replied with enthusiasm:

"Splendidly! Top wave of prosperity!"

"But, man, you don't mean that you're making money on this farm?"

"Oh, no! I never expect to make any money. But I'm losing it slower than I ever did before!"

No Tipping Here.

When I first arrived in Venice I noticed large printed announcements in my hotel and in the restaurants, "Vietate la Mancie," and on inquiry I found this meant "tips forbidden," and all over Venice tipping has been abolished, says a writer in the London Daily Mail.

The same rule applies more or less in other Italian cities, but in none, so far as I have seen, so completely and actually as in Venice. The notices are "absolutely" forbidden, others "rigorously" or "severely" forbidden, or "prohibited," others explain more fully that after August 1 tips are "abolished."

Spoiled Dad's Good Intention.

Army life at one time appealed to Sir Hugh Greenwood, recently named chief secretary for Ireland. He has told how at sixteen years of age he ran away from his Canadian home to join the army. His father followed, and found his young hopeful doing sentry duty with all the pride and juntiness of a born soldier. "The old gentleman was for giving me a sound thrashing then and there," says Sir Hamar. "But I turned out the guard and had him arrested for attempting to rush the sentry."

[illegible] THAT SAVE SPACE

Three Story Sleeping Places Are the Latest Idea to Be Placed on the Market.

Two-story beds, that is to say, bedsteads containing two beds placed one above the other, have been in use for years, but something rather novel in this line is the three-story bed, containing three beds, one above another, which was placed upon the market not so long ago.

These bedsteads, which are made entirely of iron, are so constructed that they can be knocked down to occupy comparatively small space for convenience in handling in shipment and transportation, the three-story bed separating into five parts, the head and foot sections and the three beds, each bed section having a wire mattress permanently attached to the side and end pieces.

At the ends of each mattress frame are pins that fit into slots placed at suitable heights up the head and foot pieces. To set up a two or three-story bed one simply stands up the head and foot pieces and drops the pins on the mattress frames into the slots and there is the bedstead with its wire springs in each tier ready to receive the mattresses.

Bedsteads of this sort are intended for camps, apartments, steamers or wherever the floor space is limited.

TOKEN OF THEIR GOOD WILL

Soviet Government Made Present of Entire Train to Americans Whom They Expelled.

When the soviet government took control in the Urals, writes French Strother in the World's Work, the workmen at Kyshtim organized their soviet. They waited on the American staff at the mines and said they were sorry, but a new day had dawned, in which the workers would be able to own and operate everything themselves. Regretfully, because they liked them, they would have to send their American friends away. The day of their departure arrived and the workmen and their wives and children escorted the staff, as a guard of honor, to a special train which they had provided to take them away from Kyshtim. The train was decked with flags and loaded with flowers and delicacies. Just as it was about to pull out, amid the friendly shouts of the newly enthroned proletariat, the leader of the soviet in great excitement called the senior American back to the platform. "I almost forgot to tell you," he gasped. "The special train—don't bother to send it back; it also is a present from the soviet to our good friends the Americans."

European Airplane Service.

Two Danish airplane companies have made application to the Danish government for permission to establish a regular passenger and mail service by airplane between Copenhagen and Warnemunde, Germany. The shortest and most used passenger route from Copenhagen to Berlin is by way of train to Gjedser, Denmark, two hours by ferry to Warnemunde and then by rail to Berlin. At present practically all of the Scandinavian and Baltic passengers and mail traffic to Germany is carried over this line, and during the last few months all trains have been crowded and the airplane service if established it will operate in co-operation with a German company, which will establish a regular service between Warnemunde and Berlin.

Electric Plant on Coal Fields.

The modern method of building an electric-generating plant directly over a coal supply, and transmitting energy instead of fuel to the point of consumption, is to be employed by the state of Victoria, Australia, for supplying the city of Melbourne. The field of brown coal to be used immediately is at Morwell, 80 miles away, and is accessible by open cutting. There is, it is estimated, 20,000,000,000 tons in the district and 150,000,000 tons in one square mile, enough to generate 100,000 kilowatts for 150 years. A 40,000 to 50,000 kilowatt station will be built first, which will be sufficient for three years, but later the development will be extended, and finally include the utilization of the Kiewa river and other water powers.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Corn-Cob Industry.

The United States produces from 2,500,000,000 to 3,000,000,000 bushels of corn every year. That means 18,000,000 or 20,000,000 tons of cobs. A large percentage of course, is not available for manufacturing purposes, being scattered over the farms or fed with the corn. Large quantities, however, are concentrated at central points and are easily available. The establishment of a plant for the manufacture of corn-cob products in the Ohio valley is being contemplated. Three shellers will furnish 24,000 tons of cobs a year. The plant will operate on a basis of 100 tons a day. It will turn out cob adhesive, furfural, acetate of lime and cellulose.

Concerts by Wireless.

The Philadelphia wireless school gives a concert between 9:45 and 10 o'clock every night to everybody in wireless range that has a receiving set and wishes to listen and the music is enjoyed regularly by at least 5,000 persons sitting comfortably in their homes, some of them as far away as New Brunswick, N. J. One man in Chestnut Hill made his own receiving set and it cost, outside of the receivers, cost him about $7.50.

Tanner, Sunday, June 20th, at high noon, Rev. C. B. Livingston of Stanton, Pa., brother-in-law of the bridegroom and former pastor of the bride, officiating. The couple were attended by Miss Ethel Howe of Delevan, N. Y., and Mr. Max Tanner, of Wellsville, N. Y., a brother of the bride.

Miss Dorothy Edgar, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Edgar, and Mr. Dewey Walker, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Walker, both of Hazelhurst, were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents on Tuesday, June 22, Rev. C. J. Zetler, pastor of the M. E. church, officiating. The wedding was a very quiet one, only the immediate relatives and friends being present.

They left for Buffalo on a wedding trip, after which they will reside in Rochester, N. Y., where the groom is employed.

E. R. Benson returned Saturday last from points in the west, where he visited a sister, Mrs. G. O. Plant, and a brother, Fred Benson, at Gowrie, Ia. On his way he visted Prof. D. W. Morrison at Buffalo and Wm. Rhinehardt at Cleveland, and was present at the Convention at Chicago.

ELDRED

Last Saturday, June 19, at noon, at the home of Mrs. Minnie Duryea, occurred the marriage of her youngest daughter, Miss C. Genevieve, to Francis L. Wheeler of Eldred. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. L. C. Gale, the impressive ring ceremony being used. The only guests were the bridesmaid, Miss Beatrice Taylor, the groomsman, Ronald Williams, and Miss Abigail Wheeler, aunt of the groom. The bride was daintily attired in light blue silk georgette crepe, trimmed with beads. Immediately after the ceremony, which was performed at the table, they sat down to a bountiful wedding breakfast. The happy couple left on the afternoon train for Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Canton, Ohio, where they will spend their honeymoon with the groom's father.

B. H. Moody, who has been a patient at the Bradford hospital for the past three months, was brought home Sunday and is getting along nicely. He will be a long time regaining his strength, but he is congratulating himself that he is getting along as well as he is. He certainly has had a long hard pull of it.

The marriage of Miss Lelia G. Regan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Regan of 736 Garden Avenue, Olean, to Merton Earl Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Wood of Eldred, was solemnized Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride, Rev. E. J. Fairweather of Eldred performed the ceremony under an arch of syringas and pink peonies.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Geuder, in Flint, Mich., Tuesday, occurred the marriage of John Robertson, of that city, and Miss Bertha Geuder, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Geuder, of Eldred. The newly-weds are visiting the bride's mother and relatives here for a couple of weeks, after which they will return to Flint, where they will make their future home.

At Olean, Saturday noon, Rev. Gelmire of the Lutheran church, united in marriage, Walter Geuder and Miss Elizabeth Barden, two popular young people of Eldred. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Rice of Richburg. They returned Wednesday from their wedding trip and will reside in Eldred.

At St. Raphel's church Sunday, the banns of marriage between J. H. McNulty and Miss Rebecca Tuohy were published.—Eagle.

CONCERNING REV. E. E. HELMS

The Rev. Dr. Elmer E. Helms, pastor of Calvary Methodist Episcopal church, Forty-eighth street and Baltimore avenue, has resigned to accept the pastorate of the First Church of Los Angeles. Doctor Helms' new charge is regarded as the leading Methodist church in the country.

While the resignation of Dr. Helms came as a surprise to some members of the congregation, it was known by the trustees.

On Monday Dr. Helms received a three months' leave of absence from his congregation and also a purse of $2500. On learning last night of the pastor's action much regret was expressed by the congregation. In view of the conditions, Dr. Helms said he would return the gift made to him.

This met with general opposition by the contributors. They contended that the money had been given the pastor without any strings, that the gift was made unconditionally. Dr. Helms could not view the subject from that angle, however, and checks were mailed to the contributors today.

While the trustees would like to retain Mr. Helms as pastor, they agree that he has taken the proper step in accepting the pastorate of the Los Angeles Church.

Dr. Helms is known throughout the country as a forceful speaker and also for general executive ability. The First Church of Los Angeles has a membership of 4000 and is on the eve of a million-dollar building project.

Asked why he had accepted the pastorate at Los Angeles, Doctor Helms said today:—"The trustees agree with me that I had opportunity to do much important work there. The pastor of the First Church, the Rev. Charles Edward Locke, was elected a bishop at the last general conference and I was chosen to succeed him. I like to work, and it looks as though this new charge will give me greater opportunities."

Doctor Helms came to Calvary church nearly five years ago. When there but six months he wiped out a heavy debt which had been hanging over the church for many years. He came here from the Central Church, Wilkes-Barre, where he broke all records for increasing church membership. Prior to his Wilkes-Barre charge Doctor Helms was pastor of the Plymouth Church, in Buffalo.

He graduated from Ohio Wesleyan University in 1880.—Philadelphia Ledger.

PORT ALLEGANY

Dr. R. O. Whipple has received word of his appointment as Agent of the Pennsylvania Bureau of Animal Industry, effective July 1st, and has been ordered to report at the Stock Yards at Lancaster, Pa., to begin his duties on July 5th. Mrs. Whipple will remain here for the summer. Later in the year Dr. Whipple hopes to receive an appointment to act in this section of the state, which will enable him to continue his home here. Dr. Whipple has demonstrated his ability as a first-class veterinarian, and his many friends here know that he will prove very successful in his new position.

C. S. King has had a good job of work done in trimming up trees about his residence on Arnold avenue, engaging Frank Bishop for the work. The completed job adds greatly to the appearance of his property. This is a class of work that should receive more attention in many sections of town as there are many places where limbs of trees are entirely too low over the sidewalk, and when the limbs are weighted down in wet weather it is almost impossible for people with umbrellas to pass beneath them. Properly trimmed trees also enable lawns to be kept in a more flourishing condition. Now that Mr. King has started the good work, let there be others who will follow his example.

The McKean County Commissioners has decided upon the prompt improvement of the Brooklyn and Red House bridges, and in place of the present flooring on these bridges will place two by fours on it, covered with slag macadam and asphalt, making a first class and up to date bridge in every respect. This work will be done as soon as contracts can be let.—Reporter-Argus.

"CAVEMAN" STUFF ALL RIGHT

At Least, One Indiana Man Is Satisfied With the Way It Worked in His Particular Case.

Now, she is a very sarcastic young woman, and the man who wishes to marry her is often much tormented with her ability to say things which make him distinctly uncomfortable. One night one of his friends and he decided to go to a picture house and there they saw a play in which the caveman stuff was exceedingly strong. Evidently that gave the young man an inspiration, for the next cutting remark the young woman made she resented.

He had come to take her for a drive. After getting her safely settled in his car and having placed a large box of candy in her lap he settled down for a pleasant evening. But not long. The young woman could not stand his ease. She deliberately opened her box, took out a bonbon, nibbled at it a minute and then said in icy tones: "Why, this candy is stale."

At first the young man felt inclined to writhe, but the next minute the caveman stuff of the movie darted into his mind. He did what he thought was a real rough act. He seized that beautiful box of candy and threw it as far as he could.

For a long time there was silence. Then the girl began the conversation. And this time she spoke meekly and in "simple" tones. She is still speaking in the same way whenever she is with him.—Indianapolis News.

MUSHROOMS OF ALL SORTS

Edible and Poisonous, While One Species, Grown in Africa, Is Worshiped as a God.

In or about the edges of woods one occasionally comes across an unpleasant-looking umbrella-shaped mushroom with a red or orange-colored top that is covered with a slimy exudation. Now and then, strange to say, people eat it. They die.

Its slime is very attractive to flies. They gather upon it, and they die. In Europe this species of mushroom is used as a substitute for fly-paper.

The horrible-smelling "clathrus" mushroom is believed in France to cause cancer. French people call it the "cancer mushroom." Another species, which grows on olive trees, is so luminous at night that one can see to read by it.

Other kinds of mushrooms are used for making ink, for staunching the flow of blood and (in Lapland) for killing bedbugs. A European species is employed to stupefy bees, and certain "puffballs" are said to have anesthetic properties. Tribes of semi-savages in northeastern Asia utilize a mushroom for snuff. But most curious of all is the Polyporus sacer, which in Africa is worshiped as a god.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Valuable Shrub.

One may look for an increased cultivation of the so-called Guatemalan "piocho-paranon" (anacardium occidentale), which is quite common in that country. It has been found that incisions in the trunk cause it to exude a resinous secretion that dissolves like gum arabic, and that is highly useful for pasting purposes. Used in the binding of books it possesses, besides its adhesive qualities, the added virtue of keeping away moths, because of its acrid odor. There is also obtained, from the same plant, a caustic oil, which turns black when it strikes the air. This has been found excellent in the treatment of furniture. The seeds of the fruit are roasted and eaten, as well as used for various dishes. An 18 per cent extract of oil is made, which is said by connoisseurs to merit comparison with the best of sweet almonds. According to the newspaper Excelsior of Guatemala the cultivation of the shrub provides a business of increasing profitableness.

Soot as a Disinfectant.

It has been found that soot acts as a disinfectant and is more active moist than dry. Water seems to dissolve the disinfecting agents in the soot making them more active. Carbon floating in the air seldom, if ever, carries bacteria unless it has lodged on the ground and is again blown into the air.

Now soot acts as a very effective blanket, protecting the bacteria and giving them a chance to grow. Diseases of the nose and throat are not appreciably more prevalent in smoky cities, but they are more severe and harder to cure. This is probably due as much to the cracking of the mucous membrane by the change from the dry atmosphere in the houses to the moist air outside and subsequent irritation by dust and smoke.

America's Debt to Eads.

In nearly four centuries the names of many men have become linked historically with the "Big Muddy." De Soto discovered it, Marquette, LaSalle and Hennepin were among its explorers, Mark Twain was its Homer. But James Buchanan Eads saddled it and curbed it to serve mankind. His record is unique in the engineering annals of America, with the archduke ever subsidiary in his power. He was the first to pry into its depths, to sound its secrets, wrest from it its sunken treasures; the first to build for it the first ironclads in the western hemisphere, to have swung a great bridge across it midway its length and, as the greatest achievement of all, to have compressed

ALL TOLD IN SHORT WORDS

Greatest Things of Human Life Expressed in Letters That Do Not Exceed Five in Number.

Writers who forever are striving to develop a vocabulary of long and odd words to impress the dear reader would do well to remember that the greatest things of human life are expressed by words of not more than five letters, writes E. P. in the Kansas Editor.

The word "I" claims first consideration under the classification. "I" contains the minimum as regards letters and, casting blushes aside, really stands above all things else with the human herd.

Passing on to words of two letters "do" and "if" immediately suggest themselves as being mighty factors in the daily grind of human affairs.

At the head of the list of three-letter words stands "God," followed by "sir," the most essential of the essential. In this list, too, is "war," also "law" and "art." Continuing, a most disagreeable trio appears in "tax, owe and dun," each undeniably mixed up with man's little whirl. Then come two words of great argument, "wet" and "dry," and at the end the most popular noun and verb, "pie" and "eat."

In words of four letters there are "life" itself and many of the most vital things of life—"love, home, hope, food, work, news, rest, song, hair, bald, golf, vote, bank, rent and coal."

Finally comes the five-letter group containing the beginning and the end of man's story—"birth, heart, blood, faith, woman, money, child, mirth, drink (water, milk or tea, of course), dance, motor, train, paper, ouija, sleep, death and grave."

So why seek long words to tell the tales of life, when each big vital thing is short, when one must spell it, and gives the hint, "be brief, old Top, be brief!"

LIBRARY IN SMALL COMPASS.

Properly Prepared, Pigeon Could Carry Volume of Writing Equivalent to 120 Ordinary Books.

For more than 2,000 years carrier pigeons have been used to carry messages when no other means sufficed, and during the siege of Paris in 1871, when 363 birds were sent out from the city, one bird performed the almost incredible feat of carrying to the outside world, in one trip no fewer than 40,000 messages averaging 20 words each. This was 800,000 words, or the equivalent of five or six average novels.

It was accomplished by means of microscopic photography, the message being first printed with ordinary type and then photographed and rephotographed until they had been reduced several hundred diameters. The final photographs were taken on films or pellicles of collodion, each of which, about two inches square, contained 50,000 words. A dozen of these films, rolled up in a quill, weighed but one-twenty-eighth of an ounce, and the messages could, of course, be read with a microscope, without the necessity of rephotographing and enlarging.

Under favorable conditions, and for comparatively short distances, pigeons have carried as much as three-quarters of an ounce. Using the photo-reducing method, it would therefore be possible for a single bird to carry messages equal in words to no fewer than 120 ordinary volumes.

Famous Swiss City.

St. Gall (Switzerland) is the noted embroidery seat of modern days, and one of the most influential centers of Christian civilization in central Europe. The city owes its foundation to the Irish apostle Gallus, who, in the year 614, founded a hermitage near the brook Steinach. In the resulting monastery of St. Gall, the strict rules of the Irish church were enforced until 720, when those of St. Benedict were substituted by an abbot, Othmar. In 1083, the Abbot Norpert of St. Gall erected a convent on the Sitter river, the place taking the name of Abbatis Cella-Appenzell, and the abbots of St. Gall became the dominating influence in the land, until the subsequently much-impressed mountaineers resorted to force and succeeded in shaking off their yoke.

Was Once Famous Port.

Hythe, England, has played a prominent part in history since medieval or modern times in spite of the fact that few in this country had heard of it. It is one of the famous and often discussed Cinque ports which, strategically situated along the English channel, had special feudal and political privileges and which today are especially governed, in name at least, by a lord warden. These ports were the main source of supply for warships until about the year 1500, and upon them depended in large part the duty of protecting England from the danger of continental invasion.

Kama, a Hindu God of Love.

Kama is the Hindu god of love. In one account he springs from Brahma's heart. He is armed with bow and arrows, the bow being of sugar cane, the bowstring a line of bees, and each of the five arrows tipped with a distinct flower, supposed to conquer one of the five senses. He rides on a parrot or sparrow, attended by nymphs, one of whom bears his banner displaying the Makara, or a fish on a red ground. His wife is Rati (pleasure) or Priti (affection), his daughter Tir- [illegible] and his son is

ANNAPOLIS FOUNDED IN 1604

Nova Scotia Earliest Colonized Land in North America, With Exception of St. Augustine.

Nova Scotia may lay claim to being the earliest colonized land in North America, with the exception of St. Augustine, Fla., where the Scottish establishment was made as early as 1565. Port Royal, now the little town of Annapolis, was founded in 1604, three years before the Englsh settled at Jamestown. The brave French pioneers found it necessary to suspend their colony for three years, but the settlement was resumed, died in 1610 by a group of Acadians.

The Acadians were in almost constant conflict with the English. The colony fell into the hands of the English twice, and was each time returned to the French before the English finally captured it in 1710. The Acadians remained steadfast in their hopes that French rule would some day return, but their hope was destined never to be realized. They, however, persisted in maintaining their identity even against the English insistence that they abandon their allegiance to their mother country.

The descendants of the Acadians, numbering 300,000, are to be found in Maryland, Virginia, the Carolinas, Georgia and Louisiana. When the Acadians were expelled from the Basin of Minas, Grand Pre, when they refused to take the oath of fealty to the English sovereign in 1755, many of them escaped to the wilderness and later drifted back to their former homes only to find them occupied by new settlers from New England states.

DEEP RESPECT FOR SABBATH

Writer's Recollection of How Day Used to Be Observed When He Was a Small Boy.

My mother was born and reared in a little country village in western New York. On the farm where my grandmother lived, it was the custom to begin Sunday on Saturday night at sundown. The "hired man" came in from the chores, grandmother put away all her work in the kitchen, and then the entire family gathered in the best room and studied the Sunday school lesson, or had a reading from the Bible, led by grandfather, and all the family retired not later than nine o'clock.

In the morning after doing none but the absolutely necessary chores on the farm, the team that had not been used the day before was hitched up to the big four-seated wagon and the entire family, including the "hired" help, went to church. There was preaching service in the forenoon, and then we adjourned to a lunch for ourselves and the team. Then we went in to a Sunday school service, and after an interval there was another preaching service, after which we hitched up and drove slowly back to the farm.

That was the way Sunday was kept in western New York a little more than fifty years ago. I can remember hearing my mother say that when she was a girl in the same New York state village, she was not allowed to walk except to the cemetery and back, on Sunday, and was not allowed to read any books except the Bible and "Fox's Book of Martyrs."—Christian Herald.

Rebuilding Guatemala City.

Guatemala city, in the republic of the same names which was the scene of one of the most violent earthquakes in Central American history, during the latter months of 1917 and the early part of 1918, is now being gradually rebuilt.

Guatemala was for centuries the home of the Maya-Quiche Indians. At Quirigua are located some of the most remarkable ruins in the Americas—monoliths resembling Egyptian obelisks, from the top of which gigantic figures stare at the intruder. Excavations in the vicinity have revealed the ground plan of what must have been a remarkable and imposing temple. A bulletin of the National Geographic society states that in the mountains of southwestern Guatemala live pure-blooded Indians who are known for their physique, cleanliness and scrupulous honesty.

Alpine Wonderland.

The Grisons, Switzerland's largest canton, may readily be described as an Alpine wonderland. It is broken by no fewer than 150 valleys, varying greatly in size, traversed by wild rushing torrents and streams and animated by roaring waterfalls and transparent mountain lakes. Dark green fir woods and velvety pastures cover the slopes and form the transition from the region of the hills to the realm of the high Alps. And in this radiant paradise of vales and mountains there stands on almost every height a little place of worship, an emblem of peace and good will, sending greetings far and wide.

Ancient H. C. L.

The H. C. L. is no brand new phenomenon of our own day. It was old as far back as the second year of King Darius, about 520 B. C.

"Ye have sown much," Haggai, an orator of his time, taunted his townsmen, "and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes."

Haggai's platform, his scheme for reducing that H. C. L., was the build-

PICTURESQUE IN ITS INERTIA

Town of Cajamarca, in Andes Mountains, Inhabited by People Seemingly Without Ambition.

The town of Cajamarca, nestled among the Andes mountains is, perhaps, the most unambitious community in the world, according to Harry A. Franck, who writes in the Wide World Magazine.

Cajamarca is very old, he says. The Spaniards found it when they conquered the country centuries ago, but nothing of the old Inca civilization remains, and the oldest buildings are the churches that the conquerors erected. Today, says Mr. Franck, the churches stand architecturally incomplete, not because time has demolished them but because, according to local tradition, a finished structure in colonial days had to pay tribute to the government, and so the builders economized by stopping work before the churches were finished.

It is a town where the upper class is distinguished by wearing collars and shoes and performing no manual labor, where the "lower class" is ragged and poverty-stricken, and where life goes on from year to year in a state of inertia which nobody seems to find undesirable. The unfinished churches give the old town a picturesque aspect, being built of stone and colored by the passage of time until they remind a traveler of the ancient Spanish edifices of Salamanca; nor is there any present likelihood that the town will grow rich enough to spoil their picturesque incompleteness by finishing them.

And not in a century, says the latest visitor from the outside world, has there been born in that town a boy with the initiative and energy to tramp three days over the western range, and stow away for some place where he could make a man of himself."

JOHNSON NOT FIRST IN FIELD

Contrary to Wide Belief, There Was an English Dictionary Before He Compiled His.

The oldest English dictionary is not that by Doctor Johnson, as so many appear to think. There were many such lexicons before his day, and the earliest of them all was Dr. John Wilkin's "An Alphabetical Dictionary," appended to the author's "Eskay Toward a Real Character and a Philosophical Language," published in 1668.

Everybody seems to know that the first printed London directory appeared in 1677, frequent notices in the press being accountable for much, but how many are aware that the art of living in London was first reduced to a science by Roger Crab, who in 1655 published a book, the first of its kind ever seen, in which he discourses at length on the scandalous extravagance of all who expended more than three farthings per week upon their food.

The earliest attempt to introduce phonetic spelling is afforded, so far as is known, by Butler's "Feminine Monarchy," first published at Oxford in 1609, and the "Polygraphia" of Trithemius, 1518, furnished the first attempt at secret writing.

The earliest collection of maps of England and Wales is found in the work of Christopher Saxton, which first saw the light in the days of Elizabeth. The maps number 35, and were published separately between 1573 and 1579, when a title and index were added and the whole series published in book form.—Bookman's Journal and Print Collector.

Kinds of Stage Humor.

The French, who have an armory of critical terms both more exact and more abundant than ours, distinguish between three different kinds of stage humor, Brander Matthews writes in Munsey's. There is, first of all, the mere witticism, the sentence laughable in itself, the so-called "epigram;" and this they term the "mot de l'esprit." Second, there is the phrase which derives its comic effect not from itself, but from its utterance at a given moment in the movement of the story; and this they term the "mot d'esprit de situation." Thirdly, there is the word or sentence whereby a character expresses himself unexpectedly and characteristically, unconsciously turning the flashlight on the unexplored recesses of his own soul; and they are wont to call this the "mot de caractere."

Ancient Love Filters.

In the Middle ages people had recourse to love filters, magical invocations, prayers, fastings and the like, which were modified according to the country and the individual. A girl had only to agitate the water in a bucket of water with her hand, or to throw broken eggs over another person's head, if she wished to see the image of the man she should marry. If a bridal party met a monk on going to the church the union could not be happy. A priest, a dog, cat, lizard or serpent were equally unfortunate, while a spider, a toad or a wolf secured that all would go well. How the frog came to be used is not well known, as it did not occupy its present position in former times.—Chicago Journal.

Counterfeit Reason.

"Yes, I still have the first five dollar note that I made," said the gray-haired passenger.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed his traveling acquaintance, "how did you keep it so long?"

"Well, it was very imperfect, being my first, and I'd have had trouble in

NEEDED A THOROUGH SOUSING

Evil Spirit of Hackman Could Not Be Exorcised Except by Most Stringent Methods.

Doctor Brown, a negro evangelist, was a firm believer in the ancient custom of river baptism, and converts whom he baptized in this manner seldom forgot it. A few years ago he held a christening in a New Jersey town on the banks of the Delaware river, where a dozen or more converts were assembled, awaiting their turns to be immersed. Among them was a hackman, who evinced a lively interest in the ceremony.

"Why does the good doctor," he asked of a fellow convert, "duck some of them folks two times an' others more?"

"He ducks 'em once," explained his friend, "for every new name they're goin' to have."

"Is that possible?" the hackman replied. "I was goin' to call myself Thomas Jefferson Lincoln Anderson, but I guess 'Tom' will be 'bout long 'nuff."

This conversation was overheard by the sharp ears of Doctor Brown, who finally beckoned the hackman to come forward.

"Yo' name, please?" he inquired in a deep bass voice.

"Jess baptize me 'Tom,' that's 'nuff," the candidate replied, as the evangelist, taking him none too gently by the neck, piloted him far out into the stream, where he ducked him not once but half a dozen times with such rapidity and vigor that a few minutes later the hackman found himself on the shore, coughing, spluttering and fighting for breath. The ceremony was soon over, and when he had recovered his strength he made his way to the side of Doctor Brown.

"What fo' you duck me that way?" he demanded in aggrieved tones. "I come here to be baptized, not to be drowned."

"My good man," replied Doctor Brown, "you was so filled with the devil I had to use a powerful lot of water to wash him out of yo' system."

SCUTARI HAS LONG HISTORY

Known as "Geneva of the Balkans" It Is One of the Oldest Cities in Europe.

Scutari, principal city of Albania, scenically suggests Geneva, nestling between the rapid waters of Lake Scutari and the mountains of northern Albania, snow-capped for the greater part of the year, rising to form an Alp-like background. Instead of being a city of highly organized industry and industrious and frugal artisans, Scutari has been scarred by sword, earthquake and flood.

To reach Scutari from any Montenegrin town, on the north side of Lake Scutari, one boards a "bondra," the sharp-pointed prow and stern rising high out of the water. Oarsmen propel it by short, quick jerks, often accompanying their strokes by a wild barbaric chant. The gondola-like boats on Lake Scutaria are accounted for by the Venetian influence that is evidenced in Scutari.

Scutari is one of the oldest cities in Europe, having been the seat of the Illyrian kings, ten centuries before Christ, and as the descendants of the ancient tribes the Albanians have a lineage far older than most European nationals. The world war brought the Albanians into sudden contact with modern ideals and they won admiration for fine physique and keen minds, unimpaired by soft living.

One Good Time.

I think my most embarrassing moment took place one lovely night last summer. I was engaged to be married and decided to have one good time with an old friend of mine. I canceled my intended husband's date, complaining of a sick headache, and went out joy riding. I explained the circumstances to my friend, so we decided to go to a bathing beach some distance away to take a plunge in the lake. We were having a grand and glorious time swimming and diving when lo! who should stand on the pier but my future husband. You can imagine my agony when my friend called to me, "Say, May, dive with me once more; then we'll have lunch."—Exchange.

As the Ancients Believed.

According to the Puranas of Hindu mythology the earth is circular and flat like the flower of a water lily. Its circumference is 4,000,000,000 miles. In the center is Mount Soomeros. On this mountain are three peaks formed of gold, pearls and precious stones, where the deities reside. At its base are three mountains on each of which grows a tree 8,000 miles high. The furthermost country from these mountains is bounded by the salt sea. Beyond this sea there are six others—of sugar cane juice, of spirituous liquors, of clarified butter, of curds, of milk and nectar. Each sea is surrounded by a separate continent.

Zodiacal Signs and Vegetation.

Zodiacal signs have no influence whatever upon vegetation. A fruitful season is one in which the climatic conditions, such as temperature and precipitation, have been of the nature to produce the best possible results. There is a great variation in these conditions, although coincident with the return of the same zodiacal sign. The same sign coincides with the abnormal summer as well as with the normal, and the same remark applies to any

SCOREBOARD IS HIS DIAMOND

Most Hopeless of Fans Is the One Who Can Enjoy Game Without Seeing It.

We never see him at the game, not even in the bleachers. He stands before a checkered frame with scores of fellow creatures. He cannot hear the crack of bat or see the rival dingers, but yet he visions all of that as on the curb he lingers.

He cannot hear the batters "beef" or hoot in wild derision, nor can he raise a cry of "thief" when peeved at some decision. He cannot watch, with features set, his diamond gods embattled; he cannot start a din to get the other twirler rattled.

But yet he groans or whoops with joy, looks glum or starts to grinning, when now and then the office boy chalks up the latest inning. The board dissolves before his view as do the street and alley and fancy speeds him quickly to that dear old Rainier valley.

In fancy he is with the birds that perch upon the railing, with "empties" and assorted words the robber "umps" assailing, and though the scoreboard's potent dope portends a sad disaster, he sticks around in dogged hope his heroes yet will master.

Most anyone can be a fan who owns a season ticket; it takes another sort of man to be a scoreboard picket. He swarms around the boards in packs, he's not aloof or clannish. If he were charged a sidewalk tax how soon our debt would vanish.—Carlton Fitchett in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

LAND WAITS ON RECLAMATION

Water and Modern Methods Will Make the Desert of Turkestan Bloom Like a Garden.

Turkestan is, of course, primarily agricultural country, and cotton, the major crop. The other industries still await development. There is a tremendous field for the cultivation of vineyards and rice and other cereals. At the same time, the development of agriculture will greatly stimulate the sheep-raising industry, which is now in the hands of primitive natives, uninstructed in modern methods. The fruit industry awaits the guiding hand of modern science. With the help of California specialists, Turkestan could be transformed into an enormous fruit garden. There is at present only one factory for fruit preserving. Similarly, the fish teeming in the lakes and rivers need only the introduction of modern industry to place them upon the food markets of the world. The silk industry, if properly organized, would easily become one of the most important in the world. The mountains of Turkestan are rich in unexploited minerals. Gold, iron, copper, coal and many rare and precious stones and metals await the pioneer.

There is an old legend in Turkestan that the Eden of the first man was placed in the valley of Ferghana and that for his sin Allah laid a curse upon the country and transformed it into desert. The quickening touch of water restores the desert to richness and fertility surpassing all legends. Who will build Eden anew?

Domesday Book.

Domesday Book, or Doomsday Book, is the ancient record of the survey of most of the lands of England made by order of William the Conqueror under special commissioners about the year 1080. It consists of two volumes, a large folio and a quarto, and gives the name of every proprietor of land and the extent of his possessions. All of England, except Northumberland Durham, part of Cumberland and part of Westmoreland, was included in the survey. The Domesday Book was formerly kept in the chapter house of Westminster, but is now in the public record office.

Taxes were levied by this book until 1522, when a more accurate survey was published at national cost in 1783, in two folio volumes. Two supplementary volumes were published in 1816.

Where Life Is Longest.

Which is the healthiest place in the world?

If the index is the death rate, as it presumably must be, we have to go to the unlikely neighborhood of the antarctic to find it. In the last colonial report from the Falkland islands the death rate for 1917 and 1918 was 5.31 per 1,000. During ten years the death rate in England and Wales did not drop below 13.3, and was as high as 17.6.

Yet the climate of the Falkland islands is vigorous and the country is more bleak and barren than the Shetlands. High winds blow almost constantly, but there is no scarcity of sunshine. To these, Natures' two great disinfectants, is probably due the longevity of the sparse population. —London Tit-Bits.

Measuring Colors.

An English scientist has, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, worked out a method of taking exact measurement of color. Black, white and gray are photometrically compared with standard white, and their composition expressed in percentage of black or white. A color, such as red, is compared with a white surface in a pure red light. If the red appears darker, it is matched with a gray surface under a red light, the percentage of black then being the same in both. Assigning the number 25 to red, such a composition as cinnabar would be signified by the figures 25 .04 .04, meaning red 92.4 per cent of white and 28 per cent of black.

MADE A RAID

A disorderly house in Bradford was raided by the county detective and police early Sunday morning. The proprietor, Mrs. Grace Davis, two girl inmates and six men were arrested. All pleaded guilty in police court and fines ranging from $5 to $25 and costs.

The raid took place at about 1 a.m. County Detective Allison, Police Captain Solt and Patrolman Benedict participating. The nine prisoners were arraigned about an hour later before Alderman Filkins, on charge of violating the city ordnance prohibiting disorderly houses. The Davis woman was fined $25 and costs. The two inmates, Mary Roberts and Florence Clark were each fined $10 and costs.

One of the men, Bert Huggins, alleged to be intimate with the proprietor of the house, was fined $10 and costs. The other five men were fined $5 and costs each. They gave their names as Dick Smith, Harry Tyler, Paul Conway, George Graham and Nick Wilson.

But the case is not yet closed insofar as the Davis woman is concerned. Immediately after she had paid her fine on the charge of violating the city ordnance, County Detective Allison laid information against her on a charge of violating a law of the Commonwealth by maintaining a disorderly house. Accordingly she was re-arested and held in $500 bail. The Davis woman furnished the bond and was released to appear at the October term of court at Smethport.

SHOULD GET ANOTHER BEAN

Little Probability That Hoosier Girl Will Ever Eradicate Stingy Streak From Present One.

The stingiest young man has been discovered and he is a Hoosier too—living in Terre Haute, says the Indianapolis News. He has long been termed a chair-warmer by the family of the girl whom he honors with his company, for he has never taken her to a show—even a moving picture one. As for candy and flowers, well he has not sent or brought any of either.

As he seemed to be really nice the girl decided that perhaps he was green—that he needed a little hint. So the other night she decided to give him one. After he had occupied about an hour of her time and also of her father's heat and electric light, she said: "Oh, I'm so hungry for candy. Will you go to the drug store with me so that I can get some?"

He rose to show his willingness, and the girl was delighted, believing that her plan was going to work. But when the drug store was reached and the candy was bought, he displayed no intention of paying the bill. So, of course, she had to do it herself.

Furious at him and the whole world, too, she carried the box home and put it, still in its wrappings, on the piano in the living room. And all the rest of the evening she tortured him by talking of the joy she would have on the morrow when she ate the candy.

BEARDS AS BILL COLLECTORS

Author Gives Possible Reason Why Most Publishers Prefer the Clean-Shaven Face.

Herbert Jenkins, the London publisher who occasionally tosses off a book himself, tells the story of how on one occasion when he was dining with an author and editor, the author suddenly called his attention to a man sitting alone in a far corner of the restaurant.

"That man," remarked the author, "has character. He has a publisher from whom he can never extract money. What do you think he did?"

Mr. Jenkins shook a dubious head.

"He went to the publisher's office and demanded payment. There was nothing doing. Without ceremony he seized the publisher by the beard and announced his intention of hanging on until he got a check. He got his money.

"That," continued the author remorselessly, as he fixed a speculative eye upon Mr. Jenkins' clean-shaven chin, "is why very few publishers wear beards."

Weeds and Hay Fever.

Interesting observations made by Dr. William Sheppegrell, president of the American Hay Fever Prevention association, are reported in a paper published by him. As a result of a weed-cutting campaign carried out in New Orleans in the spring of 1916 the number of hay fever cases was reduced to less than 50 per cent of the usual prevalence. The "cold storage" treatment of the disease, in which practically all ventilation is excluded in order to insure the absence of atmospheric pollen, is said to afford only transient relief, while the low temperature is likely to cause bronchitis. The effects of an abundant rain on hay fever patients is beneficial because the rain not only washes the pollen out of the air, but also permanently removes its toxic qualities, so that it is harmless when again blown into the air after the rain is over. This has been proved by laboratory experiments, in which pollen, after submersion in water, was inhaled by hay fever subjects without any apparent effect.

On Ogling Gift Horses.

"Sometimes it may prove advantageous to look a gift horse in the mouth," remarked an Australian contemporary recently. It was referring to the proposed gift of six airships to Australia and really meant "always look a dirigible in its air-valve." These six airships are said to have been on patrol duty in the North sea; and Britain, according to a cable message to the commonwealth, has offered them with hangar and equipment to the overseas dominion. Australia's minister for defense, Senator Pearce, has pinned the problem before the local air board for decision. As a commercial proposition some enterprising Australian company may welcome the dirigibles, but as a defensive equipment they are not regarded with overmuch favor.

Put It Rather Neatly.

He had been tramping for hours, and not once had he passed a place where he could refresh himself. At last, as the sun was sinking, he arrived at an old inn. When the waiter brought his order he looked at it and then at the waiter, remarking:

"Is this the best you can do in the way of a sausage?"

"Why—isn't it good?"

"Good!" repeated the hungry tourist. "Oh, yes, it looks good, but the ends don't suit me."

"The ends?" said the perplexed waiter. "What's the matter with them?"

"Not far enough apart," was the reply.

The waiter took the hint.—London Tit-Bits.

As He Looked at It.

The Optimist—"I tell you, there's no place like home." The Pessimist—"Yes, it's the one place in the world where a fellow feels that he can be just as disagreeable as he wants to be."

SCOREBOARD IS HIS DIAMOND

Most Hopeless of Fans Is the One Who Can Enjoy Game Without Seeing It.

We never see him at the game, not even in the bleachers. He stands before a checkered frame with scores of fellow creatures. He cannot hear the crack of bat or see the rival fingers, but yet he visions all of that as on the curb he lingers.

He cannot hear the batters "beef" or hoot in wild derision, nor can he raise a cry of "thief" when peeved at some decision. He cannot watch, with features set, his diamond gods embattled; he cannot start a din to get the ether twirler rattled.

But yet he groans or whoops with joy, looks glum or starts to grinning, when now and then the office boy chalks up the latest inning. The board dissolves before his view as do the street and alley and fancy speeds him quickly to that dear old Rainier valley.

In fancy he is with the birds that perch upon the railing, with "empties" and assorted words the robber "umps" assailing, and though the scoreboard's potent dope portends a sad disaster, he sticks around in dogged hope his heroes yet will master.

Most anyone can be a fan who owns a season ticket; it takes another sort of man to be a scoreboard picket. He swarms around the boards in packs, he's not aloof or clannish. If he were charged a sidewalk tax how soon our debt would vanish.—Carlton Fitchett in the Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

LAND WAITS ON RECLAMATION

Water and Modern Methods Will Make the Desert of Turkestan Bloom Like a Garden.

Turkestan is, of course, primarily agricultural country, and cotton, the major crop. The other industries still await development. There is a tremendous field for the cultivation of vineyards and rice and other cereals. At the same time, the development of agriculture will greatly stimulate the sheep-raising industry, which is now in the hands of primitive natives, uninstructed in modern methods. The fruit industry awaits the guiding hand of modern science. With the help of California specialists, Turkestan could be transformed into an enormous fruit garden. There is at present only one factory for fruit preserving. Similarly, the fish teeming in the lakes and rivers need only the introduction of modern industry to place them upon the food markets of the world. The silk industry, if properly organized, would easily become one of the most important in the world. The mountains of Turkestan are rich in unexploited minerals. Gold, iron, copper, coal and many rare and precious stones and metals await the pioneer.

There is an old legend in Turkestan that the Eden of the first man was placed in the valley of Ferghana and that for his sin Allah laid a curse upon the country and transformed it into desert. The quickening touch of water restores the desert to richness and fertility surpassing all legends. Who will build Eden anew?

Domesday Book.

Domesday Book, or Doomsday Book, is the ancient record of the survey of most of the lands of England made by order of William the Conqueror under special commissioners about the year 1080. It consists of two volumes, a large folio and a quarto, and gives the name of every proprietor of land and the extent of his possessions. All of England, except Northumberland Durham, part of Cumberland and part of Westmoreland, was included in the survey. The Domesday Book was formerly kept in the chapter house of Westminster, but is now in the public record office.

Taxes were levied by this book until 1522, when a more accurate survey was published at national cost in 1783, in two folio volumes. Two supplementary volumes were published in 1816.

Where Life Is Longest.

Which is the healthiest place in the world?

If the index is the death rate, as it presumably must be, we have to go to the unlikely neighborhood of the antarctic to find it. In the last colonial report from the Falkland Islands the death rate for 1917 and 1918 was 5.31 per 1,000. During ten years the death rate in England and Wales did not drop below 13.3, and was as high as 17.6.

Yet the climate of the Falkland Islands is vigorous and the country is more bleak and barren than the Shetlands. High winds blow almost constantly, but there is no scarcity of sunshine. To these, Natures' two great disinfectants, is probably due the longevity of the sparse population.—London Tit-Bits.

Measuring Colors.

An English scientist has, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, worked out a method of taking exact measurement of color. Black, white and gray are photometrically compared with standard white, and their composition expressed in percentage of black or white. A color, such as red, is compared with a white surface in a pure red light. If the red appears darker, it is matched with a gray surface under a red light, the percentage of black then being the same in both. Assigning the number 25 to red, such a composition as chamois would be signified by the figures 25 .04 18, consisting red with 4 per cent of white and 18 per cent of black.

GERMS FUTURE WAR WEAPONS

Scientist Draws Dark Picture of Savagery That Will Be Part of Next Conflict.

Mobilization of the mosquito, the house-fly, the louse and various other disease-carrying pests for the dissemination of deadly germs in enemy territory is a possibility of "the next war" pictured by Prof. Maxwell Lefroy, a London scientist.

"I foresee the mosquito from Brazil starting yellow fever in new lands, the house-fly, duly infested with cholera, dysentery or enteric and the typhus-laden louse doing their deadly work much more effectively than spies poisoning wells," said Professor Lefroy in a recent address.

"This would be part of the work of a war office of entomologists—the working out of strategic plans for the distribution of these pests by airplane. It seems that the world is intent upon furnishing an airplane service for these pests, many of which are now held somewhat in check by natural enemies in their native climes. This will give them just the means of transit they have required. It will be a peace-time danger as well as one that could be used very offensively in war. The danger from these 'winged battalions of death' is more serious than one dare estimate."

Airplane Has Its Limits.

The officials of the United States department of agriculture have been in receipt of many suggestions relative to extinguishing forest fires with the use of gas bombs dropped from airplanes that it has been found necessary to issue a statement for the purpose of explaining that the scheme is not feasible. For the purpose of overcoming a detachment of men, a mixture of one part of virulent poison to 1,000,000 of air would be entirely sufficient to accomplish the purpose, but one of 750 parts to the thousand would not be powerful enough to quench a conflagration. Another thing to be taken into consideration is the difficulty of dropping the bombs with the necessary precision. The art of striking a target with any degree of accuracy has not been developed at this time, and there is no prospect that it will be sufficiently perfected to the point of becoming available for the purpose of fighting fires.

To Destroy Grasshoppers.

Poisoned bran bait is a simple, reliable and cheap method of destroying grasshoppers. The formula is: Wheat bran, 25 pounds; Paris green, one pound; or white arsenic, one pound; lemons or oranges, six finely chopped fruits; low-grade molasses, two quarts. The mixture is scattered over the fields. Beneficial results have been obtained from the poison, but in whatever process is followed, communication must unite, for if one farm is rid of the insects, a new invasion will come in from the adjoining farm.

An interesting incident of all poison baits is that lemon juice is added, thus it seems that it is necessary to hand the hopper a lemon in order to get rid of him.

Europe Takes to Chewing Gum.

The jaws of Europe are wagging on American chewing gum. Efforts were made at different times to popularize chewing gum in the countries of Europe, but always without success until the American soldiers took some over there, after which the gum-chewing habit became a veritable craze. Chewing gum to the value of $2,164,290 was exported by the United States during the year 1919, and England was the heaviest purchaser. During the war chewing gum became very popular in the munitions factories of England, where it took the place of tobacco, smoking being barred.

Probably So.

"Everything has been said, even on the subject of love."

"On that subject, however, the girl interested is apt to find the beginner quite as convincing as Shakespeare."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

ELDRED

At 12 o'clock noon on Wednesday, at the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Merkel, Rev. E. J. Fairweather united in marriage their daughter, Miss Kathryn and Theodore Phalon, two of Eldred's most popular young people, in the presence of the members of the families of the contracting parties.

The happy young couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Edgar, brother-in-law and sister of the bride. The bride was dressed in a gown of white georgette, beautifully trimmed.

Following the ceremony, dinner was served, covers being laid for 14, after which the bridal couple made a "get away" from a number of friends who were waiting to give them a rousing "send off," and they are now enjoying a trip up the lakes, taking in Erie, Cleveland and other points of interest. Upon their return they will reside on King street, having purchased the C. H. Kaufman property, the house now being remodeled and fixed to suit the wishes of the happy young couple.

D. Hodnett & Co., have sold the tank stations at Olean to B. W. Marcus of that city, and A. W. Curtis of Eldred, who has been in the local office with Mr. Hodnett, is assisting Mr. Marcus now in erecting several stations at Olean. It is expected that the rest of the tank stations owned by the company will be taken over by Mr. Marcus, Mr. Hodnett continuing his oil jobbing and auto tire business. He has moved his office from the Gabriel block to his other office in the Hanigan bilding, combining the two.

W. H. Carey has bought the Morris Hungerville property on S. Main street, consideration, $4,500. This is one of the finest residence properties in town.

The marriage of Miss Louise B. Orloff and Robert A. Dennis of Bradford took place last Friday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the parsonage of the First Baptist Church in Olean, the Rev. P. H. Lynch, pastor, officiating.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis left for Utica, the former home town of the bride. They will spend their honeymoon there and return to Bradford to reside at No. 22 Charlotte avenue, where their home is already furnished for their occupancy.

The bride was a teacher at Raw City and a gradate of the Eldred High School. The bridegroom is a popular young man of Bradford.—Eagle.

A REPUBLICAN DECLARATION

First, let me say that the Republican nominee neither is a personal friend of mine nor was a favorite of mine for the nomination. I am in a position, therefore, to speak without prejudice for or against him. Briefly, I like Senator Harding, like him very much, and am exceedingly happy that the Republican party selected him as its candidate for the presidency. Frankly, if I had permitted myself and my newspapers to have a candidate it would not have been Senator Harding, not that I had anything against him, but rather because I had never looked very closely into his qualifications. * * * Be this as it may, it is clear that the picture I had of Senator Harding a week ago is not the picture I have of him, now that I have come to know him better. Following him all the way up from the farm, through childhood, young manhood seeing him as a printer at the case after he had finished his education; seeing him as the venturesome young editor-owner of a small country newspaper—daring to put himself to the test in one of the most difficult of all fields of endeavor and winning success; seeing that small country newspaper grow under his wise and vigorous handling into a prosperous and influential journal that has made him financially independent; seeing him as a Representative and later as a Senator in the legislature of Ohio; seeing him as lieutenant governor of his state and then as United States Senator from Ohio and now as the candidate of the Republican party for the Presidency—the highest honor a party can bestow on a man—all this spells something, means something. Men do not pick up records of this sort in the street. They do not come by accident. There is merit in the man who achieves as Senator Harding has achieved. As a sound, clean, human man Senator Harding, like McKinley, looms large. We could welcome such a man in the White House again. With Harding as Presient that historic mansion would open wide its doors, let in the sunlight and bid welcome to the world. * * * Seeing him as I now see him, I am entirely satisfied with Senator Harding as the Republican nominee. I shall work wholeheartedly for his election and the election of his running mate, Gov. Coolidge, and my newspapers will work wholeheartedly for his election and the election of his running mate, Gov. Coolidge. If elected Warren G. Harding will give us, I am confident, a thoroughly safe, sane, efficient administration, a wholesome, cordial, common sense administration, a clean cut business administration, an administration that will command the best brains of the country to the service of the country, an administration with its feet squarely placed on the ground. We have had seven years of hitting the sky. We have had enough for the present.—Frank A. Munsey in New York Sun.

The Bureau of Rehabilitation, established in the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry by the Legislature for the purpose of returning to remunerative employment residents of the commonwealth whose capacity to earn a living has been destroyed through industrial accident, has, up to June 1, offered its services to 397 industrial accident victims. Commissioner Clifford B. Connelley, head of the department, has received a report on the Bureau's activities from S. S. Riddle, the Bureau Chief. Of the persons injured, 240 have registered with the Bureau, including 233 males and seven females. The majority of accident victims registered with the Bureau are over thirty-one years of age. One hundred and forty-seven of the accident victims, registered with the bureau, were native-born Pennsylvanians, 22 were born in the United States outside of Pennsylvania, and 71 were born in foreign countries. Twenty-two of the total number of handicapped persons cannot read or write English. One hundred and twenty-two of the cases suffered their disabilities before the Act was passed and 118 have been injured since the passage of the Act. Sixty-one persons have been assisted by the Bureau. They were placed in school, in shop training, or in proper employment. In many of the cases, the employers in whose plants the persons were injured have cooperated with the Bureau of Rehabilitation.

A recent press dispatch from Baltimore quoted the manager of the Baltimore branch of the Federal Reserve Bank as declaring the Liberty Bond purchasers who had sold their bonds since the war below par are "four-flushers."

What in the name of common sense could poor people do with their bonds if they needed money?

How could they do anything else but sell them below par when the government permits them to be gambled upon as they are?—Sacramento Bee.

COAL NEEDED AT HOME GOING ABROAD

In March more than 1,000,000 tons of coal were exported from Hampton Roads. In April 1,200,000 tons went overseas. The April shipments alone required 25,000 cars on the Norfolk & Western, Chesapeake & Ohio, and Virginia railroads—all loaded at Pennsylvania and West Virginia soft coal mines.

And while this was going on the Boston & Maine railroad was paying $13.50 a ton for coal, equivalent to $8.50 at the mine; with New England factories constantly short of fuel, and vessels in New York harbor paying $20 a ton.

With desperately needed American coal going to supply fuel to manufacture goods in foreign lands to compete with our own factory products, and going at the rate of 1,000,000 tons a month, it is not surprising that an embargo on coal exports is considered—unless it would interfere with the administration policy of depleting our resources to make Europe prosperous.—Omaha Bee.

According to American Consular reports, British hosiery manufacturers are enjoying an unprecedented export trade with America. It looks to the casual observer, as though there is no great need for America to worry herself about financing Great Britain. We might better spend some of our sleepless nights worrying about an import duty for the protection of American hosiery manufacturers.

George Creel wants to know what protection a citizen has against the slanders of a member of Congress. That is simple. Go into his district and run against him. Prove the slander and the voters will send you to Congress in his stead.
